When we say every person has inherent worth and dignity, we commit ourselves to protecting that worth, in ourselves, in our partners, in our communities. Consent is how we honor that commitment. Preventing sexual assault is how we defend it. And supporting survivors is how we restore it. The Mission of the Lighthouse is the elimination of Domestic Violence and Sexual Assault through education, intervention, services and collaboration with the community.

“Exploring a Faith-Based Response to Climate Migration”

The global surge in migration over the past decades, often linked to climate change, is now frequently in the news and has spurred a new era of hard-right politics in wealthier countries, including the United States. According to Colette Pichon Battle, a New Orleans-based climate justice strategist and lawyer, “We must start preparing for global migration today. It’s a reality now. Our cities and our communities are not prepared.”

Join MS Lowe, long-time environmental champion, as she sets the stage for what we are facing and invites conversation about the role of faith communities in preparing for climate-linked mobility and our call to compassion and solidarity with the poor and the stranger.

Lella Lowe is a long-time climate justice champion, involved for many years in creation care programming at her church and in her Episcopal diocese. She has obtained climate justice certifications from the EPA, Climate Reality and Blessed Tomorrow, and is a member of the Mobile Environmental Justice Action Coalition, Gulf Coast Creation Care, and Mobile Bay Sierra Club. Lella has been rattling creation justice cages at Episcopal Church of the Redeemer in Mobile for nearly 40 years.
